

Why I am celibate?

Out of everything that exist in this world, planet, and galaxy, the only thing that you truly own is your body and soul. "Your body is your temple so treat it like it!"

Yes, I have been celibate since May now (after the break-up) and I am happy that I have kept that oath to this day. When God saved me from my pain and heartbreak, I decided that in this new life I would do something that would show God and myself how thankful I was for this opportunity. I thought about the one thing that I could control, the one thing that has a huge impact in all relationships, the one thing that you could honestly say that connects you with another human, besides love, and that is having sex, I like to say making love. When you make love to someone, I believe that the energy that is affecting you the most, that energy that has been building inside your soul is transferred to your partner.

If you are carrying low vibrational energy, anger, sadness, depression, anxiety, and you mix that with fear, now you have a strong force that is mostly created from negative emotions. So, imagine the type of energetic relief that you get when you penetrate or get penetrated by someone that is carrying that in their soul. All that energy goes straight into you or your partner and now you are causing changes inside of yourself or them that they did not need, or you are amplifying their energy to higher levels because of the additional energy they received. Can you imagine how your soul feels as that negative energy enters your body and consumes it, fills it with pain, or fear? At that moment you might not feel it, but I will, and it will affect me right away. If you do not believe in this that is okay, I am not here to persuade you, or make you believe anything, I am simply expressing my opinion and perception of what I experience during those pleasurable and amazing moments.

I am very aware of my energy and the energy around me, so imagine what I feel when I make love to my partner. I feel whatever energy they are carrying a lot more intensely and clearer because I am more Intune with that aspect of my being and that makes it easier for me to absorb their energy. And because of that during my single time (before exs and celibacy) I did not sleep around, and I was very careful before sleeping with anyone. So why else have I decided to remain celibate?

Well, let us start by taking a moment to use our imagination and creativity. Try to picture yourself going through this, picture yourself with the man of your dreams or woman. Picture yourself being there with them, feeling their love, feeling the warm of their body, feeling their heart beating next to yours. Can you picture, can you imagine, can you envision yourself in front of that person that has demonstrated through time and their actions how much they love you, how much they accept you, and how much they want you in their life? What do you feel? Do you feel love? Do you feel happiness? Do you feel a want to connect with them even deeper? Do you want to show them how much you want to please them because you love them? What does your heart feel? Do you feel butterflies in your tummy? Are your hands sweaty, are you excited, are you feeling nervous bubbles in your chest?

Can you feel the happiness, the excitement, the energy, the need to finally give them your entire being, to show them how much love you have for them? To finally share the love that has been brewing in your soul and heart, to show them that with every experience and memory that you both created you always saved up some love for this one moment. Close your eyes and imagine the wonderful memories that you imagine creating, imagine the laughs, imagine the moments when they were there for you, imagine the moments when they did things for you that no one else had. Can you feel the love that they gave you even when you did not ask for it? Every text that they sent you out nowhere, their need to show you how much they miss you and how much they want you in their life? Can you feel the love you felt when you thought about their face? Well, all that love that we create together through those moments, is the love that I want to feel and give when we are there, looking into each other's eyes, telling each other how grateful and blessed we are to be there with each other. To be able to finally give ourselves to one another. A love that has accepted you for all your flaws, all your past mistakes, all the sad times you were able to get by, and all the moments that made you forget about time.

This is what I imagine, this is what I dream about, this is what I think about, this is what I believe true love is. This is the love that I know I can show and give when that time comes. I am not here just to get a quick fix, I am here because I believe in this dream, and God has proved to me that I can make this dream come true. I want my actions to create a bond with that person that is so strong that our souls and hearts yearn for the moment that they can finally interwind with one another. I want to create a bond that cannot be persuaded by others, a bond that is not manipulated by what we hear, a bond that is not easily broken by a disagreement, a bond that is pure and honest. I want to work to create a bond that is strong enough that it will allow us to dream about us creating a new life together and one that will be supportive in any situation.

When I close my eyes and think about making love, I picture myself looking into the eyes of someone that has accepted me for my flaws, my past, my beliefs, my love for God, and my dreams. I picture my souls looking into their soul and letting them know that I am the person that will love them like no other. I want to be able to tell your soul that it can trust me, that it can be safe with me, that it does not have to fear anything, because I will be there to support them and help them ease their sadness or pain. When I look into those eyes I see and feel the purity of their love and their wanting of more. I feel their energy, I feel their soul, and heart waiting to share with me their vast amount of love that they have inside for me. I also see myself shedding tears of joy, tears of happiness, tears acceptance, and tears of gratefulness that we are both here together finally uniting our souls as one. So, this is another reason why I am celibate.

I do want children, and I am not in a hurry to have them, I am patient enough and willing enough to wait until we are both ready for that. But I cannot help to picture them in my life, I cannot help but to picture a little boy or little girl crying, smiling, and running around. I cannot help to smile when I picture having babies because I know that when that day comes it will be a magical day, and the best part is that I will have a little boy or girl that will remind me of the immense love that their father and mother used to create them. A love that was created through honesty, hard work, and acceptance. Can you imagine looking into those little eyes and seeing a part of you and your partners in them? Can you see the love in those eyes that we both used to bring them to this world? I can, and I dream about it, and God tells me that one day it will happen. So, I want to feel that I want to experience that, and that is why I share this with you. Is this something that you also dream about? Is it something realistic in your life? Do you want to feel the same way I described feeling before sleeping with one another? Are you okay with my oath of celibacy?

That is why I am not afraid of being honest with my past, my present, and my future goals. I am not afraid of you not believing in the same dream, that is okay, we all have our own dreams, and we must do the best to make them come true. Thanks to God I am not afraid of rejection, I am not afraid of being vulnerable, and I am not afraid of anything that is not in my present state. So that is why I remain celibate, and I will continue to remain that way until it is time to for my future love and I to give ourselves to each other with honesty, purity, acceptance, and no regrets.

Thank you and I hope that I have inspired you to dream and not be afraid to be you!

If you feel like any of this resonates with you and would like to chat please feel free to email me
@lovelypravda333@protonmail.com